Enabling laws and policies can improve informal livelihoods. The Law Programme (often partnering other WIEGO programmes) provides MBOs with research, resources, training and technical support to support their negotiations for legal change at local, national and global levels. Through research and advocacy, we seek to bring visibility to, and establish the viability of, informal workers in global human rights, labour law, and development scholarship, as well as in global policy frameworks and debates.

What we will do:

- Research implementation of India's Protection of Livelihood and Regulation of Street Vending Act and disseminate findings to MBOs
