What Does Labor Mobility Reflect?

- Job Changes Reflect both Decisions of Employers and Employees:
 - Employees moving to better opportunities
 - Employees moving as a result of lost jobs or failed self-owned enterprises
- Mobility Across Industry Sectors Reflects
 - Short-Term Labor Market Response to GFC
 - Longer-Term Structural Changes in Economy

Labor Mobility and Economic Security

- How Much Mobility is Toward More Secure Employment?
 - “Informal” to Formal Employment?
 - Employment without Contract to Employment with Contract?
- How Does Mobility Differ Across Men and Women?
- How Does Mobility Differ by Residential Registration Status?

Conclusions and Next Steps

- Migrants are More Mobile?
 - Vulnerability / Short-term Nature of Employment Relationships
 - Importance of Relative Youth of Migrants
- Workers Falling into the “Informal” Category are More Mobile
- Women are More Likely to Move Into Informal Sector, and if Leaving a Primary/Secondary Industry, are More Likely to Move Into Services
 - To What Extent is Women’s Mobility Driven by Low Retirement Age?
- As Yet Unexamined: Entry from School into the Labour Force
